Applications should be submitted by a conference organizer, who must also be a member of the Society for the Social History of Medicine at the time of application. Applicants must demonstrate: relevance to the history of medicine, broadly defined, and an economical budget. Criteria against which all applications will be ranked includes: (1) extent of involvement of early career scholars; (2) using a competitive budget; (3) originality of theme; (4) significance/impact of theme. Priority will be given to applicants who show that they have sought a range of available funding.

Completed application forms, accompanied by a detailed budget, should be emailed to:
sshmexecsec@gmail.com, with the subject heading: 'SSH M Conference award application'

Applications are reviewed after three annual deadlines: 1 October, 1 March, and 1 June. Applicants are requested to ensure that the date of the conference/workshop for which the application is being made is at least three months after the respective deadline to allow the SSHM Executive Committee time to review applications.

Successful applicants must agree to: prominently display the SSHM's logo on conference or workshop material; have the event advertised through SSHM channels; provide a report on the event after its completion, to be published in the SSHM Gazette; and advertise student and early-career SSHM travel bursaries for attendees who are SSHM members.

Please explain how the involvement of junior scholars (graduate students or early career academics) will be encouraged and what makes your event original/significant/impactful:

Please attach a budget (outlining income and details of expenditures). Budgets should demonstrate a need for the financial support requested from the SSHM. Please note that the SSHM can provide travel bursaries to students and early career researchers who attend history of medicine conferences (full details at <https://sshmedicine.wordpress.com/bursaries/>). This means that such travel costs should not be included as part of an application’s financial need.

If you would like further guidance on providing a detailed and economical budget, please contact the SSHM conference coordinator using the subject heading: ‘SSH M Conference Award Query’, Dr Samiksha Sehrawat (samiksha.sehrawat@ncl.ac.uk), in advance of the conference application deadline.
